A weekend skincare packing list that keeps product directions with the pack

Plan a weekend skincare packing list with room for several products, their original labels and their directions.

1. List your usual products

List each product you plan to bring. Keep original labels and directions so you can identify ingredients and use instructions.

2. Check carry-on liquids if flying from the US

For standard TSA carry-on screening, liquids, gels and aerosols generally must be in containers of 3.4 oz (100 mL) or less and fit in one clear resealable quart-size plastic bag per passenger. Check current TSA rules and applicable exceptions before travel.

3. Pack and check

Record quantities, confirm labels and directions are packed, and allow for requirements from your clinician or product labels. If choosing optional patches, check the selected package and directions.

TSA guidance: tsa.gov/sites/default/files/tsa-travel-checklist_05-24.pdf
This is a planning aid, not skincare advice. Follow product directions.

Weekend skincare packing list

List each product and check that its label and directions are packed.

Product	Quantity	Label kept	Directions packed

US carry-on: check current TSA rules for liquids, gels and aerosols. Standard screening generally allows containers of 3.4 oz (100 mL) or less in one clear resealable quart-size plastic bag per passenger; exceptions may apply.

Other personal requirements / reminders: