An at-home Friendsgiving outfit with indoor house shoes

Build an at-home Friendsgiving outfit from clothes you own: one neutral and one warm accent colour, a top whose sleeves push up, a layer you can take off, a waist you can sit in, and closed-back house shoes in the right size. The worksheet has an outfit table, a five-move check and a floor check.

What you need

- A top, a removable layer, and trousers, a skirt or a knit dress you already own
- Socks or tights, and closed-back house shoes in the correct size
- Outdoor shoes for any trips outside
- A chair, the floors you will walk on, and the worksheet and a pen

Steps

1. Choose one neutral and one warm accent
Pick a main neutral such as cream, oatmeal, grey or navy, and one autumn shade such as rust, burgundy or olive for the top, the layer or a scarf. Two colours make pieces from different shops look planned. This is FigureNook styling guidance, not a rule.

2. Pick pieces you can host in
Choose a soft knit, or a shirt over a tee, with sleeves that push up past the wrist, plus a cardigan or overshirt you can take off when the oven warms the room. For the bottom half, trousers with a relaxed or elastic waist, or a knit dress with tights, let you sit through a long meal. Keep trailing sleeves, fringe and long scarves away from the hob and candles.

3. Match the house shoes to the floors
Choose correctly fitting house shoes that stay securely on your feet, and walk each dry floor you will use. Keep outdoor shoes by the door; do not assume any sole suits wet or slippery floors.

4. Run a five-move check before guests arrive
Sit for several minutes, bend, reach and walk the route carrying an empty dish. Swap anything that rides up, slips, catches or needs adjusting.

Tips

- Hang a spare top near the kitchen; a splash then means a two-minute change instead of an apron all evening.
- If guests take their shoes off at your door, say so in the invitation so they can bring socks or house shoes.
- The optional product link is an affiliate link. Check the selected option, size, care directions and current return terms. Other illustrated items are separate.
