Choose slippers as a gift: sizing questions before checkout

Get the recipient's foot length as well as their usual size, match it to the right row on the seller's size chart, and write down the gift-receipt status and return date before you order. The worksheet has a three-row size-chart conversion table and a gift-receipt section.

What you need

- The recipient's usual house-shoe size, or a pair they wear often
- Their foot length, heel to longest toe, if you can get it
- The size chart and return terms for the exact listing and size option
- A ruler or tape measure, the worksheet and a pen

Steps

1. Get a foot length as well as a size
Ask for their usual house-shoe size and whether they wear thick socks with slippers. If you can, have them stand on paper, mark the back of the heel and the tip of the longest toe, and measure between the marks. The size printed in a pair they own tells you what they buy, not how long the foot is.

2. Find the matching row on the chart
Open the size chart for the exact listing. Copy the row whose foot length covers the measurement, and the next size down and up, into the conversion table. If the length falls between two rows, or the listing advises going up a size for wide or high feet, note both sizes before choosing.

3. Check the back, sole and care lines
Decide between a closed and an open back from what they wear now, then read the listed sole material and care directions. A product photo or illustration cannot show grip, warmth or fit for a particular person.

4. Record the gift-receipt status before ordering
Check whether a gift receipt is offered and read the return window and conditions. Write these on the sheet with the size chosen, then include the receipt or details so the recipient can check their options if the pair does not fit.

Tips

- Some listings sell sizes as ranges such as 7-8. Write the whole range on the card so the recipient knows exactly what to exchange from.
- If measuring would spoil the surprise, use the size printed inside a pair they wear often, and favour a seller whose return window runs past the day you give the gift.
- The optional product link is an affiliate link. Check the current size chart, materials, seller and return terms. The illustration is an AI concept, not a photo of the selected pair.
