SHOKZ Standard or Mini: measure before buying a running gift

Use this four-part checklist to record the recipient's needs, check the exact model's documentation and prepare a useful gift or handover.

1. Identify the exact product family

Write down the model name before comparing band sizes. Use the sizing guide for that specific model, since labels and measurement methods may differ between product families. A retailer's bundle title is not a replacement for the maker's size instructions.

2. Measure as the maker shows

Use a flexible measuring tape and follow the official guide's landmarks and positioning. Record the measurement and the guide's recommendation together. Do not replace the specified method with hat size or assume another person's fit will transfer.

3. Check fit with the recipient's gear

Consider glasses, helmet straps, hats, hair and jacket collars. If a trial is possible, check it while stationary before any activity. Leave room for the recipient to choose a different size if the band presses or interferes with their equipment.

4. Check bundle contents and returns

Compare the selected size, included charging accessories and return conditions before ordering. Keep optional bundle extras separate from the headphone decision. Include the fit card and gift receipt without presenting the measurement as a guarantee of comfort or safety.
